

Moving ahead in the new year, the first 12 days have been eventful and interesting, at least to me.

My girlfriend arrived about 11:30 pm and I said good bye to my sister as I headed off for a new adventure. Our first multi-day staycation together. Sleep was good, when we did sleep, but we had a totally care free night. No stress, no concerns, no cat (mine). When we weren't sleeping we were well occupied with each other. We slept in till after 10am and then got up, showered, dressed and made breakfast. We talked about lots of things in our history. Marriages, divorces, and a host of other things to bring us up to date. I even half-proposed to her. Specifically, after talking about marriage and divorce and agreeing we were not looking for that, I said, 'but if you do decide, I'm your girl.'

The thought of marriage has made me shy away quite a bit after three failed prior marriages. Still, I think I may be closer than I thought to doing it once more. So far the comment has been made and the seed planted. Who knows what may grow from it.

We ate a good breakfast, chatted about lots of things and then I dropped a file on her computer with a select of images I had collected over the years. I told her beforehand that the pictures might lead us back to the bedroom and sure enough, they did. And we had a lot more fun together.

We did some shopping during the day. We needed groceries and I found a few things on sale I needed at my place, along with some jewelry items which I turned into a necklace and matching earring set for her, but that was after she took me home again and gone off to get ready for work. She doesn't yet know about these.

Later that night, we watched Back To The Future and Back To The Future II, staying up rather late to enjoy the shows. Predictably we were too tired to do more than wrap around each other and sleep. This was the most restful sleep I have had in a very long time. We both woke up refreshed and 'busy' with each other until we again showered, dressed and had breakfast.

Since it was senior discount day at the movies, we had waited till Tuesday to go see The Danish Girl. If you haven't seen it, I recommend it. The ending was unexpected, although there were enough clues that I should have expected it. Still, the movie is well worth seeing. I had purchased the book but not yet read it. My sister should be reading it before me but that is ok. When I read it I will be able to see how closely the movie followed the book.

Later that night, after supper, we watched Bck To The Future III before heading off to bed. We slept less than we did Monday night but not as little as we did Monday morning. Wednesday morning we had each other before we got out of bed, showered and had breakfast.

Arriving back at my place, we relaxed and had time to play cribbage with my sister and she actually won one of the games before heading home. Of course, my new social security card had arrived in Monday's mail which pleased me greatly. Over the rest of the week, other important things arrived from my new bank card to checks and finally, yesterday (01-11-2016) my new standard license.

Now that it has arrived, I can make plans to get my 'real id' license and upgrade my passport.

In the meantime, I have gotten all my customer records updated to the new ME!!!! I am no end of happy to have only one name to which I need answer. Rosaliy Lynne has arrived !!!